For Today: The power of Gratitude

How often do you express gratitude? It's easy to be grateful when things are going swimmingly well but, what do we do when we feel stressed out or trapped by life's demands? What do we do when we suddenly find ourselves at a loss to say what we think or even how we feel about events around us? And what about when we've tried to handle a situation and it persists, and we try another approach and it lingers? At some point, we have to surrender our need to have all our pegs fit nicely in their square holes. We have to stop, catch our breath, and change directions, albeit for a short while. What is this all about? I started the New Year on solid ground. I made a clear decision to focus on a number of offline projects. All was coming along nicely until I hit a wall over the weekend. No, it was an imaginary not a physical wall. I had to rethink my projects. I could have remained feeling very frustrated. However, my eyes stopped on a reminder card on my desk, a message from God! "I will be handling all your problems today!"

An Aesop Story: The Hares and the Frogs

Hares, as you know, are very timid. The least shadow sends them scurrying in fright to a hiding place. Once, they decided to die rather than live in such misery. But while they were debating how best to meet death, they thought they heard a noise and in a flash were scampering off to the warren. On the way, they passed a pond where a family of Frogs was sitting among the reeds on the bank. In an instant, the startled Frogs were seeking safety in the mud. "Look," cried a Hare, "things are not so bad after all, for here are creatures who are even afraid of us!"

Moral: However unfortunate we may think we are, there is always someone worse off than ourselves.
